The residential palace was built in 1787 by the former Dutch Consul in Portugal. Several noble Portuguese families lived here before it became a hotel in 1955. Our guests over the years have included Agatha Christie, Alain Prost, Brad Pitt, Catherine Deneuve, David Bowie, John Malkovich, Johnny Depp, Kylie Minogue, Maria Callas, Marguerite Yourcenar and Mick Jagger.

According to legend, the area Seteais got its name in 1174 when one of the first Christian knights discovered a beautiful Moorish girl trying to escape the Sintra Mountains. She was bewitched and could only say “ai”, and died when she said it seven times (“Sete” in Portuguese “ais”). In our gardens, there is still a spot where if you shout “ai” you’ll hear the echo seven times.

Butler service is available to assist guests' every need from rooms to the pool and tennis courts. Tivoli Palácio de Seteais employs two butlers to make stays as seamless and personalised as possible.
